

Sermon – “Seed Bearers”

Sunday, June 16, 2024

Scripture Readings – II Corinthians 5:6-10, Mark 4:26-34

Blythe Denham Kieffer, D.Min.

Westminster Presbyterian Church

Springfield, Illinois

Our first scripture reading, II Corinthians 5:6-10, opens with a word of confident reassurance by the Apostle Paul to the believers in Corinth. “So we are always confident!” Paul writes. What makes it possible to remain confident despite the day-to-day challenges is living by faith, for we walk by faith, not by sight. According to Hebrews, Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen. Faith provides a new perspective; the ability to look beyond immediate circumstances, that which is temporary and visible, and see with the eyes of God what is invisible: the mystery, the wonder and the growth that are possible in God’s kingdom. This is the word of God.

6 So we are always confident; even though we know that while we are at home in the body we are away from the Lord— 7 for we walk by faith, not by sight. 8 Yes, we do have confidence, and we would rather be away from the body and at home with the Lord. 9 So whether we are at home or away, we make it our aim to please God. 10 For all of us must appear before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each may receive recompense for what has been done in the body, whether good or evil. Amen.

Our gospel reading, Mark 4:26-34 continues the teaching of Christ on the kingdom of God. Using parables, Christ reveals the mystery of God’s presence in our midst, the small beginnings and hidden ways of God’s kingdom transforming people’s lives and communities of faith. Listen for the word of God.

26 Jesus also said, "The kingdom of God is as if someone would scatter seed on the ground, 27 and would sleep and rise night and day, and the seed would sprout and grow, he does not know how. 28 The earth produces of itself, first the stalk, then the head, then the full grain in the head. 29 But when the grain is ripe, at once he goes in with his sickle, because the harvest has come." 30 Jesus also said, "With what can we compare the kingdom of God, or what parable will we use for it? 31 It is like a mustard seed, which, when sown upon the ground, is the smallest of all the seeds on earth; 32 yet when it is sown it grows up and becomes the greatest of all shrubs, and puts forth large branches, so that the birds of the air can make nests in its shade." 33 With many such parables Jesus spoke the word to them, as they were able to hear it; 34 Jesus did not speak to them except in parables, but he explained everything in private to his disciples. Amen.

The title of the meditation – “Seed Bearers”

The text: “Jesus said, “The kingdom of God is as if someone would scatter seed on the ground... the seed would sprout and grow, he does not know how.” Mark 4:26

Let us pray: Holy and Loving God, thank you for the mystery of your kingdom in our midst and for the seeds that make your kingdom possible. May the words of my mouth and the meditations of each of our hearts be acceptable in your sight. Amen.

Though I do not believe a plant will spring up where no seed has been, I have great faith in a seed. Convince me that you have a seed there, and I am prepared to expect wonders. ~

So wrote Henry David Thoreau in 1860 at the dawn of a civil war to free the enslaved after more than two decades of freedom preached from this abolitionist pulpit by the Rev. Albert Hale who was affectionately known as Father Hale.

Born in Concord, Massachusetts, Thoreau is best known for his book Walden, a reflection upon simple living in natural surroundings, and his essay entitled Civil Disobedience, which planted seeds of social justice that germinated in the lives of Gandhi and Martin Luther King, Jr.

Thoreau was part of the Transcendentalism movement that developed in the 1830s and 1840s in the New England region of the United States as a protest to the general state of culture and society. Among the transcendentalists' core beliefs was the inherent goodness of both man and nature. They believed that man is at his best when truly "self-reliant" and independent.

My husband Peter received a copy of Walden from his father on the occasion of his confirmation in the eighth grade; a father/son tradition we continued when Paul was confirmed. Thoreau's writings are deeply imbedded in Peter, especially in the way he sees the environment and in the belief that man is at his best when living simply and with independence. The yearbook quote Peter chose upon his graduation from Yale was from Thoreau: The swiftest traveler is he that goes afoot. Forty years later, rather than traveling afoot, Peter's self-reliance is evident in the eight-mile bicycle commute he takes from our home on Lake Springfield to the SIU Acute Care Clinic during the week and Westminster on Sunday mornings.

Thoreau's literary style interweaves close natural observation, personal experience, and pointed rhetoric. His observations of seeds and forest growth enrich the biblical metaphor of seed in understanding the mystery and growth within the kingdom of God. It is often the least among us who are the seed bearers, whether the squirrels, birds, and insects planting the forests and the fields or the teachers, role models, mothers and fathers, nurturing growth within the individual and community. All our beginnings are humble, whether we are an oak tree or a child of God and we are who we are today because of the seed bearers in our lives. Convince me that you have a seed there, and I am prepared to expect wonders.

Our youth and adult mentors departed yesterday morning for their annual mission trip, this year to New Orleans, where they are jumping in with both feet bearing seeds of hope and faith in the rebuilding work they will do. Tomorrow Westminster's Steadfast Neighbor team begins our fifth annual service week sowing seeds of goodwill in our neighborhood through simple home repairs in acts of kindness, collaboration, and continuity.

Last weekend the Kieffer Family gathered outside New York City at the wedding of one of Paul's dearest childhood friends. I was honored when Will Shao asked me to officiate at his marriage to Christine Cui. I was reminded of the importance of seed bearing when Will thanked me in a heartfelt note for including him with Paul during his youth on mission ventures which formed the bond of their friendship and shaped his character. Convince me that you have a seed there, and I am prepared to expect wonders.

Without the seed, there is no growth...no rising of the sprout into the branch that eventually becomes the tree. How the seed becomes the tree is one of the mysteries of God's creation. For Jesus—this ordinary, everyday event of planting seeds sheds light on the beauty of God working in our lives. The kingdom of God grows mysteriously and independently to build character, fortitude and perspective within us. By the grace of God, we can live lives that are loving and kind, tall and resilient, with roots that extend deep within the earth, grounding and nourishing us...the deeper our roots, the taller our reach. Convince me that you have a seed there, and I am prepared to expect wonders.

George Conway talks about the seeds that make this growth possible in his book on parenting called Giving Good Gifts. He talks about the way our children view the world and the values that shape their lives...the seeds we plant that germinate within their hearts. Conway talks about the importance of a transcendent perspective, which literally means to be able to look beyond what is right in front of us. It allows us to put our present circumstances into the proper perspective! Planting this seed in our children's lives doesn't mean we have all the answers, rather it means we walk with them on their journey of discovering faith in God.

Whatever life presents us... whatever path we find ourselves traveling...whatever opportunities we have to plant a seed, even the smallest of seeds, may we walk with courage, plant with conviction, and see beyond our immediate circumstance, with confidence in the mystery of God's presence in our midst and in the small beginnings and hidden ways of God's kingdom transforming people's lives and communities of faith.

“Jesus said, “With what shall we compare the kingdom of God...it is as if someone would scatter seed on the ground.

Convince me that you have a seed there, and I am prepared to expect wonders. Amen